Mozart started so young, and was so prolific that we're lucky to be left with a huge treasure trove of his music, despite his early death. From Masonic music to jokes showing off his (weird) sense of humour, topped off with a piece composed by rolls of a dice, 125 years before John Cage was even born.

Being an American musician means being adventurous, pushing boundaries and exploring new sounds. The challenge for musicians in performing this repertoire is that you have to throw yourself into it fully and with a courageous spirit. To me, these recordings show that trailblazing spirit.
